What’s in a name? When it comes to the name “Macedonia,” a newly independent country and its neighbor find disputed history, culture, and territory. Keith Brown and Loring Danforth, anthropologists who have worked in North Macedonia and Greece, will share their perspectives on the naming controversy that finally, though not to everyone’s satisfaction, came to an end in 2019. We encourage audience questions, via the Zoom chat function, and will address them to the presenters during the last part of the discussion.

Loring M. Danforth:
Dr. Danforth is the Charles A. Dana Professor of Anthropology at Bates College. Among his publications are: The Macedonian Conflict: Ethnic Nationalism in a Transnational World (Princeton University Press, 1996) and Children of the Greek Civil War: Refugees and the Politics of Memory (With Riki Van Boeschoten, University of Chicago Press, 2011).

Keith Brown:
Dr. Brown is the Director of the Melikian Center and a professor in the School of Politics and Global Studies at Arizona State University. Among his publications are: Loyal Unto Death: Terror and Trust in Revolutionary Macedonia (Indiana University Press, 2013) and The Past in Question: Modern Macedonia and the Uncertainties of Nation (Princeton University Press, 2003).
